Glossary

Abduction

A form of reasoning with strong ties with induction that grounds social scientific accounts of social worlds in the perspectives and meanings of participants in those social worlds.

Action research

An approach in which the action researcher and a client collaborate in the diagnosis of a problem and in the development of a solution based on the diagnosis.

Ad libitum sampling

A sampling approach in structured observation whereby whatever is happening at the moment that observation is due to occur is recorded.

Adjacency pair

The tendency for certain kinds of activity in talk to be characterized by linked phases.

Analytic induction

An approach to the analysis of qualitative data in which the researcher seeks universal explanations of phenomena by pursuing the collection of data until no cases that are inconsistent with a hypothetical explanation (deviant or negative cases) of a phenomenon are found.

Arithmetic mean

Also known simply as the mean, this is the everyday average—namely, the total of a distribution of values divided by the number of values.

Asynchronous online interview or focus group

Online interviews may be asynchronous or synchronous. In the case of the former, the transactions between participants are not in real time, so that there may be long spaces of time between interviewers' questions and participants' replies, and, in the case of focus groups, between participants' contributions to the discussion.

Attached email questionnaire survey

A survey in which respondents are sent a questionnaire, which is received as an attachment by email. Compare with embedded email survey.

Behaviour sampling

A sampling approach in structured observation whereby an entire group is watched and the observer records who was involved in a particular kind of behaviour.
